In the high Andes of Peru, Quechua and Aymara mothers have long sung their children to sleep with simple, circling lullabies built from the world around them — rivers, mountains, llamas, and the great condor overhead. These songs, carried by voice alone across generations, remain a cherished part of Andean family life.

Traditional Andean (Quechua and Aymara) lullaby style. The English lyrics are an original singable arrangement offered as a respectful tribute to the tradition's imagery of mountains and nature.
