This gentle Burmese lullaby speaks directly in a child's own voice — asking a parent to come close, to hold them, to stay near until sleep comes. Its simple, loving request mirrors an idea found in lullabies across Myanmar's many ethnic traditions: that safety, more than anything else, is what finally lets a child close their eyes.

Traditional Burmese lullaby style, based on a documented traditional refrain. The English lyrics here are a singable arrangement offered as a respectful tribute.
